Mrs. Cleveland as a Musician -Arranging for Informal Receptions-Future Movements.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.] FORESTPORT, July 15.—Notwith-standing that the sun rose gloriously over the hills this morning there wer no signs of life at the residence of Dominie Cleveland, where the presidential party is stopping, until ne o'clock. During last evening Mrs. Cleve-land played a number of selections on the piano and sang one of her favorite The music, however, seemed to attract the villagers, and as soon as the fact was discovered she' ceased. The curtains were not drawn, and the party could be seen chatting together. Cleveland, although still wearing a bandage over her eye, seemed to enter into the conversation with energy. The bouquets presented to her at Clinton were displayed about the parlors.

The agent of one of the hotels or Lawrence river arrived here this morning for the purpose of endeavor-ing to induce the President to hold an informal reception at the hotel designated by him during the afternoon of to-morrow. The citizens of Watertown, too, are very desirous of enter-taining the presidential party for a short time to morrow morning

The special train conveying the Presi dent and Mrs. Cleveland will reach there at 10:30 Å. M., and will be not by General-Manager Britton, of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg railroad, accompanied by a number of Mrs. Gleveland's Oswego friends. The President's arrange-ments provide for a dinner aboard the

This afternoon Railroad-Commis sioner John D. The President did not rise to break fast with the remainder of the family but remained in bed till noon. He is suffering from fatigue and a slight at tack of cholera morbus. Dr. A. G. Brower called during the morning and gave him a little medicine. Railroad-Commissioner Kernan also made the President a brief call. Mrs. Cleveland's eye pains her still, and altogether the party is sadly in need of the rest they are now enjoying. The President has decided not to alter the arrange-ments made for the excursion to-mor-

The President did not leave his room till nearly neon. It was learned that to morrow's jaunt will partake of the nature of a family reunion. The fam-ily affection among the Clevelands is very marked, and the trip to Forest port was made with this meeting it view. Besides the President and his wife and Rev. Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Cleveland, the party will con-sist of Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveof Holland Patent, and Mrs. Youmans, of Wayne county, his sisters; his nieces, Miss Harriet Hastings, of Clinton, and Miss Carrie Hastings, of Smith's College, Mass.; Fairchild and wife, and

AN ONTARIO HORROR.

Collision of Trains Resulting in Fire and Great Loss of Life.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.] St. Thomas, Ont., July 15.—A ter rible accident occured at the crossing of the Grand-Trunk railway and Michigan Central railway in this city about 7 o'clock this evening. An excursion train on the Grand Trunk from Port Stanley ran into a passing freight train on the Michigan Central railroad with a number of cars loaded with oil attached. The engine crashed into one of these cars, when the oil instantly took fire and burned fiercely, communicating to the cars on both trains and extending to Griffin's warehouse and coal- and lime-sheds adjoining the track on the west, and to John Campbell's dwelling on the east; all of which were burned to the ground, with their contents. Engineer Donnelly, of the excursion train, was bu-ried in the wreck. The fireman jumped and escaped with slight injuries. The forward car of the excursion train was filled with passengers, who made desperate efforts to escape from the burning car, but notwithstanding hundreds of brave and willing hands were immediately at work to assist in their rescue, it is feared that a number of lives were lost, and the bodies will be burned beyond recogni tion before they can be got out of the wreck. At 8 o'clock, when thousands of people were crowding around the burning pile, one of the oil tanks on the ears suddenly exploded, throwing bundreds to the ground with great force, and scattering the blazing on in all directions and severely, perhaps fa-tally, burning many. Nine bodies have already been recovered burned to

It is almost impossible to ascertain with any certainty the names of those lost in the wreck until the arrival of the late train from Port Stanley. There are many conflicting rumors, but it seems almost certain that Engineer H. Donnelly, Mr. Zesland (a clerk in J. & W. Mickleborough's dry-goods store), Mr. Zesland's child, and the wife and child of James Smithers, dry-goods merchant, were killed. Mrs. Zesland was got out badly burned.

Among the lejured by the explosion are Hermen Ponsford, bricklayer—feared fatally; Nelson Gadsby, black-smith, burned in the head; W. H. Joyce, engineer on the Grand Trunk railroad, badly burned in both arms; W. H. Walbourne, chief of the fire department, in the neck; Charles Dake, of the Dake House, hands and back; Richard Woodruff, back and neck; Oliver Nosworthy, neck and back; Archie Nosworthy, neck and arms; son of Mr. Potts, master me-chanic of the Michigan Central railway. burned on the neck; and scores of others who were taken to their homes before their names could be learned. Gangs of men are hard at work removing the debris, PLOPERS RAPPLING THE LAW.

A Couple from Rolland Land in Jersey City and Evade the Police.

[New York Tribune.] Three passengers on the Red-Star teamer Westernland, which arrived at ber pier in Jersey City about 5 o'clock yesterday morning, created considerable excitement in official circles and engaged the undivided attention for about forty-eight hours of a number of reporters, lawyers, detectives, and others. Interest in the party was aroused by a dispatch sent by the Minister of Foreign Affairs in Holland to the Dutch Consul in w York informing him that the wife of Jeseph Van Heyst, of Boxtel, near Antwerp, had eloped with Jules Van Dooren, a linen-manufacturer of the ame place, and that the couple had taken with them Elsa Van Heyst, aged three, and 50,000 florins, together with a quantity of jewelry. Consul Plantin was also instructed that the Holland lovernment desired the detention of the party.

Consul Plantin employed lawyers, and the machinery of the law was put in operation. Assistance was asked of Chief-of-Police Murphy, and he put Detectives Dalton and Pearson on the case. The Westernland came up the barbor on Wednesday night and anchored in the stream. She was boarded by a number of officers and others interested in the case, and Van Dooren and his companions were found to be registered under the names of Jean J. Verdongen, wife and child. For some reason they were not moested.

The steamer was hauled into her deck about 5 A. M., and three hours later the three went to Taylor's Hotel. They remained in the hotel until about noon, when a carriage was called and bey were driven to the New Jersey Central railroad-station at Communi-paw. Counsellor E. S. Cowles ac ompanied them. At 4:10 P. M. hey took a way train, but their destination could not be asceraned. They left their baggage on e steamer, and during the day an atchment was placed on the trunk containing the jewelry. The lawyers who are acting for the Dutch Government eemed to be completely baffled. Several schemes for detaining the elopers were suggested, but they were all abandoned. No complaint could be made on which a warrant for their arrest could be issued. Chief-of-Police Murphy says the case was spoiled through somebody's stapidity. Marshal Bernhard, of New York, bearded the steamer while she lay at anchor in the stream, and it seems that Van Dooren learned from him that the officers of the law were on track. When Van Dooren landed in Jersey City and placed the woman and child in Taylor's Hotel he sought a lawyer, who informed him that neither nor his companion could be arrested. In the mean time Counsellors Fisk and Abbett, who were acting for Consul Plantin, were endeavoring to get a writ of habeas corpus to secure session of the child, but before they could get the necessary papers the party had gone away. A detective went on the train with them.

BIG CATTLE SUIT.

Eight Hundred Thousand Dollars Wanted by Scottish Investors.

Chicago, July 15.—A suit for $300,-000 was begun in the United States Court this morning by the Swan Land Cattle Company, Limited, of Edin-burgh, through their solicitors, against Alexander H. Swan and Thomas Swan, of Cheyenne, and others. In 1883 the Swan and Frank Live-Stock Company, the National Company, and the Swan-Frank-Anthony Cattle Company, com-posed of the above-named parties, were grazing cattle over ranges in Wyoming Perritory. These corporations joined with James Wilson, of Edinburgh, and sold out for $2,553,825 to the Swan Land and Cattle Company, which Wil son had worked up among Scottish capitalists, among them being Lord Douglas Gordon and Colin J. Kenzie. The complaint alleges that the purchasers relied upon the false representations of Alexander H. Swan, upon untried inventories of cattle, and upon reports of one Thomas Lawson, an agent in the pay of the selling companies. The complainant says that instead of 89,167 head of cattle, as represented, there were no more than 60,000, and that in many other respects were the inventories which were shown them untrue. In making the sale the complainant says Swan represented that the number of calves from the herds would equal 22,628, while, in fact, there were only 1,600. The complainant asks $800,000, which they say ould only about cover the loss they sustained.

of the failure of the firm of Swan Brothers, of Cheyenne, a few weeks ago. # OUR EDUCATORS. LAST DAY OF THE NATIONAL CONVEN-TION AT CHICAGO.

Report of the Committee on Resolutions for the Improvement of the School Systems-National Aid Urged.

[By telegraph to the Dispatch.]

CHICAGO, July 15.—The Educational Convention concluded its session to-day. The report of the Committee on Resolutions was adopted. The resolu-tions ask for a more complete divorce-ment of school offices and politics; the extension of the school year and increase of teachers' wages in rural districts; the adoption of some plan whereby meritorious teachers after long service may be honorably retired; the passage of laws where necessary to secure the attendance at public schools of all persons of school age who are deficient in the rudiments of an English education; the increase of public libraries and the establishment of closer elations between them and the schools; fostering of Kindergarten and appliances of its spirit and methods into lower primary grades; recognition of the value of industrial art; more earnest attention, not only in instruction of fundamental principles of morality, but also to careful training of pupils in moral character; increased attention to instructions in civics as special prepa-tions for duties of citizenship; value of

They also specially commend to Congress a National Bureau of Education as an agency of increasing value and worthy of more liberal support, and reafirm the convention's conviction of the urgent necessity of temporary Federa aid in the education of the illiterate misses of the South. The following are the concluding resolutions: "We express our profound interest in the education of Indians; heartily commend the spirit of liberality shown by Congress in the manner, and call special attention to the important and encouraging results already achieved.

"We recommend to the several State legislatures the adoption of laws—first, requiring instruction to be given in all public schools of physiology and hy-geine, with special reference to the in-jurious effects upon the human system of alcohol and narcotics; second, laws suppressing the publication and sale of impure literature; third, laws forbidding the sale of tobacco to youths."
A committee of three was appointed to communicate with appropriate committees in Congress concerning the resolution of the convention on the subject of national aid to education. Mr. Mayo said that he had travelled in every State in the South, and had a strong conviction that unless national aid was speedily and generously af-forded to the southern people in their heroic efforts to grapple with this great problem, the wished-for consummation must be delayed for another generation The people of the South were doing as much as they were able to do, and ye only three million of children were re-ceiving as much as four months' educa

EARL ARERDEEN'S TRIP. in New York Finishing His Journey

Around the World. [New York Times.] Four persons alighted from a car-riage at the Hotel Brunswick about 10:30 o'clock last night and walked slowly across the broad walk. By the time they reached the door they had seen all that was easily in view up and down Fifth avenue. The leader of the party wore a loose lounging suit of gray, and over his ears was pulled a big oft hat that may have been once white. was covered with a short black beard. His companion was noticeably tall. Once within the hotel the leader threw a shadow over the register with his white hat as he wrote, "Earl and Counwhite hat as he wrote, "Earl and Countess of Aberdeen." Then a gentleman, by comparison exceedingly dapper, was registered as Professor Henry Drummond, of Scotland, and the rest was left to elevator- and hall-boys, porters, and trap-carriers. In their rooms up-stairs the Earl and Countess extended greetings a few minutes later with a party of callers, and chatted affably about various matters that travellers weary with a long journey are not always disposed to be affable about. Their arrival in this city completes the last stage but one of trip round the world that began in De-cember last. They reached San Fran-cisco from New Zealand June 11th. After a visit of a few days they went to Salt Lake City, thence to Colorado Springs and Denver. At Denver they assisted in the jubilee celebration. I hen they went to Kansas City, took a trip into Texas to visit the ranch of a prother of the Countess, thence to St Paul, where another brother from Cheyenne met them, thence to Milwaukee, to Chicago, to Niagara Falls, and to this city. They will sail for home on the Servia to-morrow afternoon.

From the day they reached San Fran isco attentions have been generously shown them at every stopping-place by Scotch and Irish deputations and so cities. No effort was spared to prove the grateful affection of the Irish toward this most popular Lord Lieutenant that country has lately known. From what he saw at these demonstrations Earl Aberdeen thinks himself better nformed in regard to the kind of peoin this country who sympathiz with home rule than are the English journals. So far as he could observe in crossing the continent Ireland's sympathizers here are in the main very respectable people. Speaking of the coercion policy, he said that while it may have been rightly reit may have been rightly garded as ominous for Ireland, thought it more likely to sound the death-knell of the Conservative administration. American support of Mr Gladstone, he said, was of undoubted benefit in Ireland. It probably does no good to the Liberal party in England, however, because the English press takes care to keep the public misinformed upon this subject. He hoped to be home in time to vote against the bill in the House of Lords. Public sentiment was surely changing in Ire land's favor, he thought. His observa-tion at home and abroad, he said, had shown that friendship for Ireland and loyalty to the Queen might go together. When England could see this the revulsion would come.

Victor Hugo's Ideal Home.

[Pall-Mall Gazette.]
The translation into English of Vic The translation into English of Vic-tor Hugo's most interesting prose work, "Choses Vues," gives additional inter-est to the sketch of the great poet's ideal home published by a French con-temporary, from which we take the following extracts: For a long time past Victor Hugo wished to have a house of his own instead of a rented house. He liked to talk about it, thinking that he would in it more closethinking that he would in it more closethinking that he would in it more closely unite those who were dear to him.
But there was one obstacle which prevented him who had begun life as an "enfant sublime" and who ended it almost unaltered.
Like a child he hesitated because he did not know whether his fortune allowed him to realize his dream.
He often asked "Am Trich enough?" He often asked, "Am I rich enough? At the beginning of 1884 his friends de cided to answer the question accurately. They went to Rothschild's, where Hugo's money was deposited. On their return the following dialogue took place between the poet and Messra. Vacquerie and Maurice: "Have you any exact idea as to what your fortune amounts to?" "No; but I should like to know." "Would you be satisfied if you had 3,000,000f.?" "Indeed I would; 2,000,000 is a nice sum; I should be glad if I had so much." "Very well, then; you have nearly 6,000,000." Soon after the ideal home was begun. "I want a large house between a court-yard and a garden, and with a large door in the middle," said Victor Hugo to the architect. The plan being some what difficult to make the actual con-struction was delayed, and in 1835, three months be ore his death, Hugo frequently asked, "When are you go-ing to build me my house?" In this ing to build me my house?" In this house the poet proposed to live with M. and Mme. Lockroy and his two grandchildren, Georges and Jeanne, on he plan that he should be strictly independent of them in his part of the house, the motto being "Chacun chez soi et tous chez Victor Hugo." Each party, therefore, had its own entrance, its private stairs and apartments, and only a few rooms were common property. * * Victor Hugo preferred that part of the house from which he could overlook the street. M. Lockroy liked the view of the garden. Mounting Victor Hugo's stairs, you found that his rooms were of the greatest simplicity. He has his room, his bath-room, and a room for his valet; that is all. It is superfluous to describe his own room, which has been described by everybody, and it was still the same, the only difference being that a valuable collection of old wood carvings had been added to it. The epilogue to the history of this house is its owner died before it was finished.

German Advance. [Nine centh Century The extraordinary martial success

premacy, and the exorbitant burdens which she has submitted for the purpose of keeping up her colossal standing army have caused the outside world, and especially the English world, to lose sight of the great pro-gress she has made of late as a comgress she has made of late as a commercial and industrial community. This progress can only be compared to that made by France under the Second Empire, while it has this signal advantage, that it is in the main result of individual enterprise, not of State iniative and impulse industrial development of Germany has proceeded part passa with her military aggrandizement; and when-ever she is relieved from the dread of immediate attack, which, with or without reason, is her dominant thought at the present moment, as it has been ever since the late war, her policy will necessarily be directed by com-mercial rather than strategical considerations. Germany has all the conditions required for the creation of a great mercantile community. She has a large and hard-working population a central position; her people have the trading and colorizing instinct; her merchants have established themselves successfully in all parts of the globe.
All that she requires to become a firstcless mercantile power is free acof a large searfaring popula-tion. Given these conditions, it is not difficult to foretell that Ger many, if she retains her military su-premacy, will not rest content without baying a better seaboard than she at present possesses. Sooner or later the Austrian ports on the Mediterranean will probably be made available for the extension and development of German trade. This object could, how-ever, be attained without the need of any territorial changes, pro-vided Austria could be induced to enter the German Customs Union. It is enough for my present purpos Behind him sauntered a woman, dressed quite as comfortably for travel as a man bly, be converted into a German port without any necessity for a resort to medium height and of slender figure. An interesting phenomenon has for some time past been observed on the eastern coast of the Caspian Sea. The Kara Eobhas is an estuary nearly sepa-rated from the main body of the sea by a bank through which there is an inlet. The evaporation from this gulf is so great that a current continually sets in from the Caspian, and, as there is no return current, the water of the gulf becomes more and more saliferous, and a deposit of salt is in course of formation. The natural result of this would appear to be that in time this gulf will be cut off from the Caspian, and being thus dried up, will become an extensive salt bed.
